THE SPREAD OF THE CHINESE.

The Pacific Coast is not the only country where the battle against the Chinese is being waged. Recent population statistics show that the Mongolian is spreading over the earth wherever he can find a foothold. He has no love of his native country because the conditions of life are almost unsupportable. In the overcrowded regions of China there is little else but hard work, famine, disease and discomfort. There was a time when China considered that its true policy must be one of seclusion. It erected a wall about itself and as a result millions of people grew up to live where their forefathers had lived and the country soon became inadequate to support the tremendous increase of population. It changed its policy and began to vomit its surplus over the face of the earth. There are now 500,000 Chinese in the Malay Archipelago and 1,500,000 in Siam. Over 200,000 have entered Chili and Peru since 1860, and 130,000 have settled in Cuba. It is estimated that in twenty-five years these people have wrasted $200,000,000 from the United States. Were China a warlike nation it could absolutely conquer any power of the world by sheer force of numbers. It could dump an army of 50,000,000 soldiers upon our shores fully armed and equipped if it chose. But the people of China through years of starvation and servile labor have become almost wholly wanting in physical courage, and makes its conquest in another way. The Chinese are like rats gnawing the inside of a cheese. The cheese looks fair enough from without but it soon becomes hollow inside. In another quarter of a century the whole world will be arrayed against the Chinese.

PROGRESS OF THE CHOLERA.

Cholera is increasing in the Adriatic provinces of Italy and Austria and in some of the interior cities of Italy which escaped last year. The new cases number two or three hundred cases daily, and the death rate ranges from fifty to one hundred and fifty. Alexandria, Egypt has quarantined against the countries on the other side of the Mediterranean, fearing a return of the plague by the same route over which it marched into Europe. Writers on the history of cholera have frequently remarked the tendency of the plague to double back along the main lines of travel, especially between Europe and Asia. The cholera has its home in Asia and thither it seems to seek to return after penetrating into Europe and committing ravages for one or two years. By comparison with the epidemic of last year, the present one is mild, showing that the mysterious force by which the pestilence is propagated has begun to wane. Last year, in the middle of the year the cholera in Spain was attacking about 1,500 persons daily, and the number of deaths were equal to about forty per cent of all who were attacked. Before the end of July 2,000 a day were stricken; and by the 15th of September 5,000 cases a day had been reported. From that date the epidemic gradually abated. Measure by the same proportion, the epidemic of this year will probably increase to 800 or 1,000 cases per day with a death rate of 300 of 400. In all likelihood, this is the last year of the present cholera invasion. Southern Europe will probably be free from it next year, and Northern Europe and the United States escape entirely.

The labor organization instituted by King Solomon, which is the oldest organization now in existence in the world, teaches that the twenty-four hours of the day should be divided into three equal parts, whereby we find eight hours for work, eight hours for the service of God and deeds of charity, eight hours for refreshment and sleep—not a bad division of time.

The Eureka Tri-Weekly Standard, being instigated by the devil and not having the fear of God at heart, says: There are two things a woman likes to get into papers—her front hair and her name.
